A 1920's Weekend of Secrets, Scandal... and Suspicion

Mrs. Evangelina Loveday is a best-selling romantic novelist, famed for her tales of pure-hearted heroines and dashing, gallant heroes. Attraction is always present, but never consummated — marriage is the ultimate reward. Her literary success rests on this winning formula and unblemished reputation.

To celebrate the publication of her latest novel, Evangelina is hosting a weekend house party at her Devonshire home, Wildmoor Hall. Among her distinguished guests are aristocratic Russian émigrés, displaced by the Bolshevik Revolution — each with a past as mysterious as their manners.

But then two unexpected visitors arrive — a monk from a silent order and an Irish nun with secrets of her own. As dry martinis are shaken, one thing becomes chillingly clear:

Murder, is on the menu...
