Your hosts: ANNE RAINBOW and CHRISTINE COOKE

Anne Rainbow is a successful and highly respected teacher and writer.

Anne's ScrivenerVirgin blog encourages writers to use Scrivener, the sophisticated writing tool, which can take an author from blank page to self-published book. Her website is also the door to RedPen through which Anne offers online training for writers in self-editing, marketing and self-publishing. For a few students at a time, this provides access to her RedPen Mentoring scheme.

In her ebook, EDITING The RedPen Way, Anne explains her tried-and-tested approach to self-editing: a simple three-task system which provides a SMART – specific, measurable, attainable, realistic and timely – route to a polished manuscript.

Anne's objective is always to help budding writers to learn how to edit their own words, and therefore to maximise their chances of having their stories and novels accepted for publication. And, she makes it sound fun!

Christine Cooke is a writer, poet, blogger and lifelong journaller. Writing is simply part of her being.

She enjoys experimenting with form, and writes narrative prose, poetry, flash, short stories, memoir, travel, and about creative living and writing at JourneyWords www.journeywords.co.uk.

Passionate about living creatively, Christine lives in an historic former watermill & runs five holiday cottages on a 20 acre smallholding in a hidden Devon coastal valley which has a unique literary heritage. Here, she offers writing workshops and retreats.

Christine has lived and worked abroad, is multilingual and a qualified therapist. Her articles on expat life have been published in newspapers and magazines. She grew up in Lincolnshire and studied English at Oxford.
